Above: kayaking in the West Fjords of Iceland with Borea Adventures.

In ICELAND, boating hits higher latitudes. With the new company Borea Adventures (www.boreaadventures.com), consider taking your place on the 12-berth, 60ft sailing vessel, the Aurora. Trips, which include birdwatching, kayaking and photographic expeditions, explore the remote, little-habited West Fjords in Iceland's north-west. The inaugural trip departs in April. Alternatively, call the specialists at Borea to do ice-climbing or skiing in the region before the thaw.
